Successful Year of Funding with Res. Ed.

(picture to the left): Live Green, a curricular, residential learning community, requires that students attend an alternative spring break trip. This year, the community went to Great Sand Dunes National Park with the help of the Res. Ed. Mini-grant fund. The Leadership Development Community, a themed residential learning community, went on a retreat together at Pingree Park this past March, with the financial assistance of the mini-grant.

The Res. Ed. Mini-grant fund supports RAs in developing programming that positively impacts the learning and success of CSU residential students. Any proposal that creates an environment that is conducive to students’ academic success will be considered. Grants that are most often approved have a faculty or staff member speaking or attending the program.
